Plans for Center Street announced

By GARY LEAVITT
Universe Staff Writer

ing in the middle of Center Street owntown Provo will remain but will duced to one row instead of two.
flow of through traffic traveling east and west will be rerouted along 100

South between 100 East and 500 West.

These were the two main decisions made at a public hearing on downtown redevelopment in the Provo City commission's chambers Monday.

About 50 citizens, property owners and merchants attended the meeting to hear proposals by City Planner Eugene Carr and Albert Christensen of Architect Planners Alliance.

Architect Planners Alliance has been engaged by the city to study the downtown shopping situation and to provide recommendations for an overall design and re-modification.

The one solution that reached a general consensus was to maintain parking along Center Street between 100 East and 500
West but reduce parking along the center of the street to one lane of diagonal stalls instead of two lanes.

In addition to reducing parking,
through traffic will be rerouted along 100
South between 100 East and 500 West.
Planners say this will allow the south side Center Street businesses to be included in the total redevelopment scheme.

MERCHANTS CONTENT that parking along Center Street is necessary because it provides the shopper with easy access to the stores. Rerouting the thoroughfare and reducing center lane parking will allow safer parking and still provide stalls close to the businesses.

There is currently space for 100 cars
along each block of Center Street between 100 East and 500 West, according to City Planner Eugene Carr.

Reducing center parking to a single lane and maintaining curb-side parking will allow 77 cars per block, added Carr.
Commissioner Grange said that if store employees would not park on Center Street, "the difference would be made-up in adequate off-street parking."

Also reaching an agreement with merchants and property owners was the proposal to provide trees, shrubbery and other plants in a beautification effort.
Christensen said this would provide the shopper with a more pleasant atmosphere and still permit him to make purchases should he be in a hurry.

PLANNERS WILL CONTINUE to study the downtown shopping center problems with other areas of concern being:

- How to fully utilize the second stories of stores to provide more space.
- How to provide an overall unity to the store fronts.

- The problem of financing.
- The problem of maintenance. Who will do it and what will it cost.

- The idea of a trade center with merchant displays and information on where items can be purchased.

City planners and members of the Architect Planners Alliance will again meet with merchants and property owners July 10, at 8 p.m. in the city commission chambers to consider further downtown redevelopment proposals.

George Romney and Mrs. Romney join in with nearly 10,000 other voices singing the "Star Spangled Banner" at patriotic services Sunday night in the Marriott Center. The service was the kick-off for Provo's Fourth of July Freedom Festival. Mrs.
Romney also spoke Monday for the "Women in Academics Series" in the Varsity Theater. For further details see page 2.

merica faced with crisis

Abuse of power cited by Romney

By CHARLES ZOBELL
Universe Staff Writer

merica's present problems of inflation corruption in government have ed from an abuse of both political economic power, according to ge Romney, former member of rent Nixon's Cabinet.

aking Sunday at a patriotic service
the Marriott Center, Romney said, frica, as it approaches its 200th versary, is faced with a dimensional crisis: a crisis resulting the abuse of power, a crisis of ndence, and a crisis of the spirit."

aining the first dimension of the e, Romney said the economic power nce belonged to the consumers is in the hands of big business and big
s. "The consumer has not only to benefit from our progress, but he is getting it in the neck more and
," he said.

OMNEY SAID this has occurred se "anti-trust laws are incomplete out-of-date, and our collective aining laws promote monopoly on the part of employees and us."

The former Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, said this concentration of economic power has "given economic organizations tremendous political power—so much that neither Democratic nor Republican administrations have been willing to deal with the problem head-on."

Romney said the worst result of this concentration of economic power is the failure of the first Nixon Administration to curb the wage-price spiral through fiscal and monetary action. He said the resulting crisis brought about the "drastic precedent of a governmentally controlled economy."

UNLESS COMPETITIVE ENTERPRISE laws and collective bargaining laws are modernized by making them subject to the decision-making power of the consumers, there will be some form of permanent government control, Romney warned. "If this happens," Romney said, "freedom will shrink."

Romney said just as inflation is a result of concentrated economic power, corruption in politics is the result of "an excessive concentration of political power that has been arrogantly abused."

The former Michigan governor explained that the burdens and responsibilities of the President are so great that he is forced to delegate much of his power which he is not then able to properly supervise.

He said he hopes the Watergate scandal will jolt the American people into a careful review of the "maldistribution and abuse" of power.

Romney offered six steps to insure the success of the American Revolution.
These are:

- Putting consumers back in the driver's seat economically by dispersing the swollen power of big business and big unions.

- Realigning the division of power between the President and Congress by strengthening Congress.

- Increasing state and local government responsibility for problem solving.

- Reducing the "intolerable" total tax burden.

- Adopting specific and effective limitations on political contributions and making certain they are enforced.

- Adopting public policies that will encourage greater reliance on private enterprise.

No devotional

There will be no devotional assembly today.

Originally, a student body assembly was scheduled in place of the devotional. Those plans were cancelled, however, and due to the proximity of July 4, a replacement speaker was not selected.

Next Tuesday, L. Tom Perry, Assistant to the Council of the Twelve, is scheduled to speak at the devotional. All are invited to attend at 10 a.m. in de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

Mask clubs play

Fifty one-act plays will be presented to the public this summer by the Drama Department.

The Mask Club is in charge of the productions, with undergraduate students serving as directors.

The schedule calls for presentations every Tuesday at 4:00 p.m. and Wednesdays beginning at 7:00 p.m. The student directors have selected plays written by noted American and European authors.

Mask Club, which meets in the Neike Experimental Theatre in the HFAC, presents three different plays at each performance.

There is no charge for Mask Club productions.

Lenore Romney says

'Be motivated to act by truth'

LDS women who get involved in politics should be motivated by truth, according to Lenore Romney. Mrs. Romney spoke Monday on the role of women in politics.

Mrs. Romney has been involved in politics through her husband's governorship in Michigan and his post in the Nixon cabinet as the Students begin English study

Students arrived at Brigham Young University from Europe, Asia, and Latin America this week to participate in an Intensive English As a Second Language program sponsored by the Linguistics Department.

In addition to their six hours of daily instruction in small group sections (seven to ten per section plus language labs), students will be involved in a wide variety of activities to acquaint them with American culture, including pageants, rodeos, summer plays, nature hikes, visits to historical sites, etc.

The group program provides not only for extremely rapid progress in English skills but also has generated a great number of friendships (at least one marriage from last year's groups) and a dramatically revised view of the Mormons and Americans in general.

Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Mrs. Romney ran for the Senate in Michigan in the 1968 election but lost.

"Remember if we serve our God we will not stoop to any immorality in government areas," said Mrs. Romney.

"We must have voices throughout this land concerned about the moral crisis," Mrs. Romney explained.

Instead of counting the positions held by women we must count the influence women have on humanity, she added.

The moral decisions which we make today will affect humanity and this should be our concern, Mrs. Romney explained.

"We have opportunities for moral decisions every day of our lives," Mrs. Romney said in relation to making decisions which will change humanity.

When effecting change "don't think about the problem," she said, "I think through the problem."

If you want to change things work on one problem at a time. Mrs. Romney advised. "Get in and do it" she advised when you have decided what to do.

As LDS women we must decide how we will influence the future of mankind, she added. We should ask, "What does life expect of me?"

"We are supposed to be able to love, we are supposed to be unselfish," Mrs. Romney said that because of this LDS women can change things for the better.

Knowledge should be used to help others instead of as an ego satisfier, according to Mrs. Romney.

She encouraged members of the Church to "become the salt of the earth," and go forth and make the world better.

"We understand the meaning of life, and the destiny of life," Mrs. Romney said.

Mass transit services in Utah to be analyzed

Mass transit service in Utah Valley is so low that it is "almost non-existent," according to a representative of a Denver-based transportation planning firm.

Robert Leigh of Alan Voorhees and Associates said, "I've seen many areas this size with 10 times the level of bus service found here."

Leigh made the comments Thursday at the monthly meeting of the Citizens' Advisory Committee of the Utah Valley Area Transportation Study (UVATS).

He explained that his firm has been hired by UVATS to conduct a short range study of what the transportation needs will be in the valley by 1980. The study will be done in two parts, according to Leigh.

He said the first phase will be a study of the use of present bus service. Results of this study will be analyzed to determine what level of service ought to be provided in the valley.

Leigh emphasized that the second phase would be conducted only if warranted. He said its purpose would be to "make definite recommendations of how to improve the transit picture here." He indicated that the recommendations could include a public takeover of the bus service.

According to Leigh, the public attitude toward publicly-owned mass transit systems has been changing. He said 10 years ago probably 90 per cent of transit systems were privately owned compared to 75 per cent today.

One major goal in transportation should be to minimize it because it is non-productive, Leigh commented. He said people to be encouraged to do walking and bicycling.

Blind students need assistance

Visually handicapped students participating in the demonstration school need the aid of commuting from the Salt Lake City area.

The four students could be picked up at the 725 entrance to the freeway in Lake City, according to Mrs. J. Craig.

The blind students need to be on campus from 9 a.m. to noon.

If possible two different people could pick the students up also take them back to the South entrance to the freeway, Mrs. Craig said.

The students will need rides this week and the next six weeks.

Those who commute from Salt Lake area and have room for the four students and interested in helping can call Mrs. Craig, 254 Training Extension 4347.

Career advice center opens

A central agency to coordinate all career advisement at BYU has been created, announced President Dallin H. Oaks last week.

The new organization includes a Career Education Council made up of administrators on the dean's level, which will direct the work of a new Career Education Coordinating Committee, involved directly with the career education programs.

Chairman of the Career Education Council is Dr. David M. Sorenson, director of the Personal Development Center and assistant dean of student life. Other members are Dr. Robert Spencer, dean of Admissions and Records, and Dr. C. Terry Warner, dean of the College of General Studies.

Noting that BYU has a number of organizations involved in career advisement, Dr. Sorenson said, "For the first time at BYU all services assisting the students relative to their majors and career selection from pre-admission to graduation are coordinated by a central agency."

Heading the Career Education Coordinating Committee will be

Dr. Spencer J. Condie, chairman of the Department of University Studies.

The new program is an outgrowth of determination expressed by President Oaks a year ago to improve advisement at BYU. At that time he expressed concern that a large percentage of college students in the nation lose time by changing their majors, some several times, and also a large percentage of graduates do not follow work for which their majors trained them.

Dr. Sorenson explained that regardless of the point at which a student needs or seeks help regarding his major study or career plans, the coordinated organization will go into operation in his behalf. For example, the high school graduate newly approved for admission will receive considerable instruction.

BYU students undecided about a major may register in the Department of University Studies. Those who have majors receive further assistance in the advisement centers set up in each college. Through a reference system, the agencies are integrated and conflict avoided.

"We can't make a choice for the student, but we can give him greater understanding of himself and all possible information on the present and future job market, understanding of majors of study and their requirements and the jobs they lead to, so that he can make the best possible decision," Dr. Sorenson explained.

"A career should encompass more than a job," he said. "It also refers to life style, family, leisure time use, church and civic responsibilities, and other interests."

He explained that many freshmen do not have majors, but this may not be serious depending upon the objectives of the student.

Manti's Temple Hill is setting for Mormon Miracle Pageant

The Mormon Miracle Pageant, based on Latter-Day Saint history and doctrine, will have nine performances this summer at the Temple Hill in Manti.

The pageant will be presented July 12-14 and 16-21.

Swimmers needed

BYU students with swimming training are "urgently" needed to help children with learning disabilities, said Calvin H. Bartholomew, program director for the Special Education Dept.

The children will swim Tuesday at the Richards Bldg. swimming pool starting today. Volunteers will receive free passes and suits.

"We can teach children math, science and other skills, but when we get them in the water, they need very special help," said Bartholomew.

Interested students should contact Bartholomew.

Last summer the pageant drew 110,000 spectators in eight performances and this summer seating facilities will be expanded to accommodate larger crowds each evening, according to Wilbur W. Cox, Sanpete South Stake president, who is chairman of the pageant's executive committee.

"We plan on having seating for 12,000 at the foot of Temple Hill this summer," said R. Morgan Dyrenge, Manti, the pageant's general chairman. "Thousands will be asked to bring their own lawn chairs or blankets. Space to provide an audience of 20,000 with an excellent view of the stage is available at Temple Hill."

Based on an original dramatic reading first written and presented by Miss Grace Johnson, Ephraim, the Mormon Miracle had its first performance at the Sanpete County fairgrounds in Manti in 1967.

"Each year the script has seen modifications for the development of a more elaborate production utilizing the most modern facilities in the way of sound, lighting and staging," said Chairman Cox.

Ballet West premieres dances

Ballet West will include two Salt Lake premieres in its upcoming 10th anniversary season.

"Square Dance" and "Prince Igor" will be performed for the first time in Utah during the company's 1973-74 season, according to Carol Thalman, Ballet West publicist.

The production of "Prince Igor" will make Ballet West the only company in the world to have this Russian Ballet in its repertoire. The Polovetsian Dances from the same opera will be featured. Staging for Ballet West will be by Yurek Lazowsky, with music by Borodine.

"Square Dance," choreographed by George Balanchine, will feature a string quartet to accompany the dancers.

Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake" will open the season on Sept. 1. The company's Christmas tradition again will bring WILL Christensen's "Nutcracker."

The February production, he Stravinsky's "Firebird," "Carmina Burana" will follow March with a 100-voice chorus.

For ticket information, call 322-1636 or 364-4343, or write Ballet West, Box 11336, Salt Lake City, 84111.

Research by cutback affected

Congress has allocated $400,000 for a shrub research laboratory in Provo, but it cannot be used immediately due to President Nixon's impoundment of the funds in an effort to cut back federal spending.

According to Dr. Ben Wood, assistant professor of botany and range science at BYU, the lab would be built under the direction of the forest service to eventually accommodate approximately 30 scientists.

Seniors and graduate students would have possibilities for summer employment and to do graduate work under the direction of the forest service and BYU faculty members.

BYU was selected for the site of the lab because of the research it has done in that area, and also because of its proximity to the Great Basin Experiment Station in Ephraim, which is the center for shrub research.

Wood says the objectives of the lab would be to study the brouse shrub species of the intermountain area to see if they would be adaptable for beautification purposes of homes, highways, right of ways, campgrounds and for reclamation of depleted lands. The shrub would also be studied for the use of feed for domestic livestock and wild game.

"We're anxious for the lab to be built because it would create many more opportunities for research," said Dr. Wood.

Students must register cars

All out-of-state BYU students bringing a car to campus, as stated in the student vehicle handbook, must secure an out-of-state permit immediately upon registration at the university.

To obtain a permit, a student must present his home-state vehicle registration, proof of current safety inspection from Utah or his home state, 50 cents and verification of student status to the Traffic Office, B-69 ASB or the information booth at 1230 N. 150 East.

"We are reminding students only for their benefit," said Lt. Robert W. Kelshaw, asst. chief of BYU security. Students can be cited for non-registration.

Full-time employees or students whose spouses are full-time employees must purchase Utah plates.

Credit offered for waterskiing

Special Courses and Conferences is offering a way to stay cool with credit—PE 176R, waterskiing.

There will be two sections from July 16 to August 17. The first section will be conducted from 1 to 4 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The second section will be on Wednesdays and Fridays at the same hours.

Registration started Monday in 242 HRCB. The cost of the course is $35 for one-half hour credit.

News deadline set

Due dates for news items being submitted to the Universe for publication are at noon on Tuesday and Thursday.

The articles must be double-spaced.

Short supply of part-time work hampers job-hunting in Provo

Students looking for part-time work for the summer may have some difficulty because most employers would rather hire students who will continue to work at the end of summer.

A spokesman for the Provo City Employment Agency reported a short supply of jobs for the number of students applying this summer. He felt the best possibility for obtaining part-time work would be to apply for a year-around job.

BYU Employment has a little brighter outlook with some openings in custodial and secretarial positions, said Mrs. Carole Walker of BYU Employment. "Other openings occur frequently and students searching for jobs are encouraged to apply," she said.

A listing of possible off-campus jobs can be found on the bulletin board in the BYU Employment office.

Lifters take national title

Y extramurals rank high

By GLENN KIMBALL
Universe Staff Writer

BYU extramural teams have done extremely well this year.

According to Jay Naylor, director of extramurals, members of the power weight lifting team, one of the newest and most successful of the University's extramural teams, took the national title in their sport.

He explained that extramural sports are those sports which are played between colleges but which are not sanctioned by the NCAA. Besides power weight lifting, these sports include rugby, soccer, lacrosse, chess, bowling, skiing and volleyball among others.

He said that there were 100 lifters from over 40 colleges in the competition.

In its second year, the team holds 28 out of 36 possible state records in power weight lifting. All of these records were set during the past year, Sheppard said.

SHEPPARD POINTED out that during this past year Gordon Buck, the 123 weight class lifter for BYU set a new dead lift record for the nation lifting 430 pounds. Buck also won the top individual honors in his weight at the Pacific Northwest Championships.

The bowling team also had a winning season.

The team, according to Shafter Bown, ELWC games center director, won the ACY Tournament, the Washington State Bowling Tournament, the International Bowling Tournament, the region 17 top honors for five states and also the top individual honors in a Las Vegas tournament.

Don Vincent set a new house record for the games center in bowling with a three game total of 761. He bowled 236, 246 and then 279.

Rita Schetsel set a new house record for girls with a three game total of 636.

BOWN ALSO indicated that Drew Meistrup set a house record for the consecutive number of games bowled with 51 in six hours. During this time he knocked down 8,426 pins, averaging 165.

The rugby team moved higher in the national standings this year and played some of the top teams internationally for the first time while on tour in Canada.

Coach John Seggar said BYU will probably rank third in the nation after this year's 23 win-2 loss season. The rugby team won the Western Athletic Conference invitation and the Tucson Desert Classic. The team kept the Desert Classic cup, having won it three years in a row.

Dee Herren, member of BYU nationally ranked soccer team, maneuvers ball toward goal

In Canada the squad played against the British Columbia provincial team and the Welsh National Touring team from England which are reputed to be among the best teams in the world. The rugby squad was defeated in both encounters, said Seggar.

BYU's ski team also retook a trophy for a third year straight victory, making it a permanent part of the BYU collection.

Dr. Clayne Jensen, assistant dean of the College of Physical Education, said the team won the Westminster Trophy for a third time at one of two big competitions the University skiers won this year. Jensen said the ski team this year was "the best we've ever had."

The soccer teams had winning seasons, the white team taking the intermountain tournament.

THE SECOND year lacrosse team is also up and coming, according to Naylor.

The team won one half of its games, having played against more experienced teams. Naylor said this is outstanding for a second year squad.

The chess club hosted two invitational chess meets at BYU and placed high in the Provo Open which was won by Australian grand master Walter Brown, said Paul Yearout of the club.

He indicated that Rauli Uitto won the first Golden Spike Chess Tournament in Ogden, which is the biggest honor coming to a chess BYU chess player this year.

Perhaps some of the most notable successes came in the area of women's extramurals.

In ping pong Bown said, "We qualified a girl for the national competition for girls, but she was unable to play because of a change in the scheduling of the tournament to Sunday." He said she probably would have won the tournament, considering her talent.

In the 13 main women's extramural sports, BYU took first places in six sports and second places in two in the district competitions. The first places came in track, swimming, synchronized swimming, gymnastics, volleyball and softball, according to Dr. Jensen. In intermountain competition, BYU women won four first places—in volleyball, softball, synchronized swimming and field hockey.

Bill signed to cut off bombing

CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) —
President Nixon Sunday signed historic bill cutting off ing in Cambodia by Aug. 15
the warning that he would Congressional help if further es are necessary to "win the
" after the deadline.
The last remaining element of ence in Southeast Asia is a stable Cambodian settlement," the President said. "I believe that settlement can be secured so long as we maintain reasonable flexibility in our policies, and essential air support is not withdrawn unilaterally while delicate negotiations are underway."

NIXON SIGNED both a $3.4
billion supplement appropriation bill for fiscal 1973 and a continuing joint resolution to provide vital funding for government operations. Both measures contain amendments aimed at ending the eight-year-old U.S. combat involvement in Indochina.

Nixon said he had vetoed the original supplemental bill that week, which also contained an antibombing amendment, because "such a precipitous step would have crippled or destroyed chances for achieving a negotiated settlement in Cambodia. The stability of Southeast Asia would have been threatened and we would have suffered a tragic setback in our efforts to create a lasting structure of peace."

NIXON HAD worked out a compromise with the antiwar advocates in the Congress by getting agreement for an Aug. 15 cutoff of funds instead of an immediate halt of funds to pay for bombing in Cambodia and other military activities in Indochina.

Nixon plans statement

CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) —
White House said today that President Nixon will speak out on the "Watergate affair as soon as the Senate Watergate committee concludes the current phase of the investigation.
The phase is expected to end
some time in August.
Exactly how Nixon intends to comment still has not been decided, Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler said.

The presidential spokesman said Nixon would not be specific as to how after the Watergate phase of hearings ends that Nixon will speak out.
Ziegler ruled out any press conference until that time. He said "the President will not speak before the committee to discuss the matter because he feels it was the responsibility to maintain the prerogatives of the executive branch."
Ziegler reiterated that the President will not appear before the Watergate grand jury, quoting the White House position that such an appearance would be constitutionally inappropriate.

to FCC inquiry

portscasters may find ome jobs in jeopardy

Howard: clear picture

By JOYCE JONES
and
BOB DAVIS

Some sports announcers throughout the nation may find their jobs in jeopardy because of a recent FCC inquiry.

The FCC is investigating professional and amateur leagues and teams which require private radio and television stations to give sports organizations the power to select sports announcers.

Issues involved in the inquiry concern whether the station owner is relinquishing control over programming by letting the club or sponsor choose, hire and pay his play-by-play announcer.

The FCC is taking action to determine whether a team-employed sports announcer is subordinating the public interest by programming his own private opinion.

PAUL JAMES, who announces BYU's basketball and football games, will probably avoid any problems with the FCC investigation because he is an employee of KSL, not BYU.

"KSL decides who will do the announcing, not us," said Clyde Sandgren, legal counsel for BYU. "They pay James, we don't."

"Nobody says anything to me at KSL or BYU," James explained. "No directions have been given to me on how to announce a game."

"Stan Watts used to kid me about not announcing turnovers, but he never told me not to do it. The only thing ever said to me by BYU officials is, 'Paul, use your best judgment.'"

JAMES SAID he tries to be objective even though he does look for the good side, not the bad. However, he said he reports the negative aspects of the game when he sees them.

He admitted that he does favor BYU a little bit because he broadcasts all the University's games, yet he said he tries to take away the identification factor by using "BYU" instead of "we" or "our."

There is a certain amount of entertainment involved in announcing, according to James. "I must entertain, but not to the point of twisting the facts."

BILL HOWARD, an employee and sports announcer for the Utah Stars over privately owned KALL radio, may encounter problems with the FCC inquiry, but said he is in favor of the investigation.

"There is definitely some of this

Water safety law needed for river

The Central Utah Water Council has asked the Utah County Commission to enact an ordinance prohibiting the use of any floating device, or swimming on or in Provo River.

The ordinance was proposed as a result of the drownings that have occurred in the river this spring and in past years.

According to Arnold Roylance, Utah County Attorney, the regulation of water sports on the Provo River is primarily the responsibility of the Utah State Parks and Recreation Department.

Commissioner Paul Thorn says that it is out of the county's jurisdiction. According to Myron Fulmth, chairman of the Central Utah Water Safety Council, they were not aware of this when they submitted the proposed ordinance to the county.

air system being tested problems of maintaining the need temperature at the Eyring Center stem from several air factors.

According to Paul Rasmussen, construction engineer, the system new and is not entirely complete as yet.

Plans to install a heating and conditioning system were not available at once and sections of the building were conditioned before others as to life need and money available.

Present, adjustable pulleys being installed on fans to give in the exact speed ratio, mussen explained.

Heat and air regulation require ear to test," said Rasmussen. It is impossible to test conditioning in the winter and heating system in the summer.

Some wiring and fan installation d to be completed yet before final inspection of the ing is completed.

John Dean's Watergate testimony draws student reaction in survey

By CECILIA DAY
Universe Staff Writer

Williams: pivotal

Christensen: tired

Students' reactions to John Dean's testimony about the Watergate coverup vary from believing he is telling the truth to believing he is trying to coverup his own involvement.

Students' comments also ranged from hoping the President wasn't involved in the coverup to believing he was.

In a man-on-the-street survey, out of approximately 50 students approached, only 15 gave comments. Two out of three students felt they weren't adequately informed to comment.

"I THINK JOHN DEAN is trying to cover up for himself. I don't have much respect for him, it is hard to answer unbiased," said Sande Morales, 20, a social work major from Santa Barbara, Calif.

"First off, I think a lot of the things he says are true," said Tom Bandley, 26, from Orem who is working on his master's of education. Bandley said we shouldn't talk about impeachment of the President until Nixon says something.

"Fehrlhman, Haldeman and Dean are the ones really behind the Watergate coverup," he added.

the only survivor of the crash. According to one nurse, Gina has not yet asked about her family. "She appears to have blocked the accident completely out of her mind," the nurse said.

Meanwhile officials of the National Transportation Safety Board are investigating the cause of the crash which occurred last Wednesday. L.E. Martin who is heading the investigation attributes the accident to engine malfunction.

Witnesses to the crash report the plane climbed about 150 feet before plunging to the earth.

Investigators still need to examine parts of the engine before they can determine the exact cause of the crash. As of now Martin is convinced the engines just did not have what it takes to lift the plane from the runway at this altitude.

Power ratings for the twin-engine aircraft are more than adequate for take-off in this area but for some reason they did not perform according to specifications, Martin said.

"I THINK DEAN is incriminating himself by mentioning other people in his statements," said Lyman Noyes, 25, a marketing major from Caldwell, Idaho.

"Dean's testimony will be the pivotal point if they bring impeachment charges against the President of the U.S.," said Don Williams, 37, an education administration major from Logan.

"If what Dean says about the meetings are correct, inquiry into impeachment would be OK; if not, Dean has misused his office of trust in the federal government," Williams added.

Leron Gubler, 21, a communications major from Porterville, Calif., said Dean wasn't definite enough. "I expected him to have more proof, he didn't put the President."

"He could be more explicit," said Pernilla Baker, 25, an art major from Salt Lake City. "He didn't say enough."

OTHER STUDENTS expressed weariness of the entire Watergate coverup. "I'm tired of hearing about Watergate; it's been played up too much," said Caroline Christensen, 36, a business education major from Richfield, Ut.

"Everything about Watergate turns me off. I can't think it would come to that," said Ruth Nielsen, 20, a social work major from Fountain Green, Ut.

"From what I can see, there is a great discrepancy between Dean and Nixon; it depends on who to believe—Dean or Nixon," said Ruth Nielsen, 20, a social work major from Fountain Green, Ut.

"Personally, I think I would take the opinion of the President over that of John Dean," commented Rich Dean, 29, a nursing major from Evanston, Wyo.

"DEAN'S TESTIMONY is really interesting. It is either true or false. Either he or the President has to be right," said Chuck Gould, 25, a business major from Litchfield Park, Arizona.

Kathy Wellard, 19, a psychology major from Salt Lake City, said she hoped the President wasn't involved, while Estella Harwood, 19, a nursing major from Spanish Fork, said, "I think the President knew about it."

Touring BYU students visit NASA Skylab control center

Thirty-five American Indian students from BYU listened in on a conversation with the three orbiting Skylab astronauts during a visit to Mission Control of the NASA Space Center near Houston.

The students are on a six-week show tour with the BYU Program Bureau "Lamanite Generation" troupe to Texas, Canada, Wyoming, Montana, North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arizona.

The Indian student-performers were guided through the center by Astronaut Don Lind following a performance in Houston's Jones Hall where an audience of 2,300 persons, including a group of astronauts and their wives, gave the group a standing ovation.

The group is made up of talent from several different tribes representing 600 Indian students from over 60 tribes enrolled at BYU. In addition, some Mexican and Polynesian talent complements the group.

Under the direction of Program Bureau Creative Director, Janie Thompson, the "Lamanite Generation" was begun in the summer of 1971 when a handful of "mostly-Navajo" talent toured Southern Utah and North Arizona. They have performed Disney World, Fla.; in the Jubilee Auditorium in Saskatoon, Canada; and at the John Wayne Theater Knotts Berry Farm in Los Angeles. In addition they have participated in the Navajo Tri-Fair in Window Rock, Ariz., and the All American Indian Dance Festival in Sheridan, Wyo.

According to Miss Thompson the troupe still feel special when performing for their people and each tour is designed to provide as many performance reservations as possible.
